 Case of Lichen.

The Patient has already had an attack of Small Pox. The cutaneous eruption now present has lasted for a couple of weeks. This can hardly be called a case of skin disease, though it is likely to end that way. In all cases of cutaneous diseases, though not exanthemata, we may have febrile symptoms. The treatment will be addressed to the acute character of the disease: to the removal, if possible, of the morbid state of the skin. — If there be any organic cause, this may keep up the irritation. — Potions are tolerable.

Patient has been afflicted since last June. Previous to that time he had an attack of hemorrhoids. Otherwise he has enjoyed tolerable health. Has been accustomed, to some little excess, to the use of intoxicating drinks. Has been afflicted with an attack of dysentery for the last week. This is evidently a very chronic case. The Urine, upon examination exhibits no albumen, consequently it cannot indicate any serious kidney disease. The diagnosis is entirely a provisional one.
There is no enlargement of the spleen or of the liver. Nothing to enlighten concerning the direct cause of the disease except a deep-seated pain. The patient has considerable pain in the stomach accompanied with flatulence. It may be a case, and probably even of irritation of bowels consequent upon an attack of hemorrhoids.

 is quite tympanitic. Bowels are well. The abscess has opened several times in the last four Inspection. There is not any enlargement of the liver present.

The Heart is somewhat enlarged.
Percussion is not unusually dull on the left side of the Chest. The percussion on the back part of the chest is not by any means as clear as we generally meet with it; but not remarkably dull.
The Matter has probably found its way through the diaphragm into the lungs causing the purulent expectoration. The opening of the abscess by incision, cannot well be recommended at present.

Pulse is full and strong; though Patient is much debilitated.

There is no evidence of any inflammation of the stomach. Possibly the pus does enter the stomach from the lumbar abscess. The diagnosis is somewhat provisional, and a further history of the case will probably throw more light on it.
